A Sabbath in Autumn.
BY WM. WINTER.
How gently tolls the village bell
This quiet Sabbath afternoon;
With now a pause and now a swell
Of solemn music, all in tune!
How calmly through the deep blue sky
The little fleecy clouds are borne,
How soft the breezes murmur by,
While all the leafless branches mourn!
It is the calm and lifeless peace
That tells the course of false decay;
That changeless nature's pulses cease,
And life and beauty fade away.
'Tis thus our little lives decline;
So pass our few and fleeting years;
While stars of hope delusive shine;
Run through the misty vale of tears.
But when the weary days are gone,
And sorrow's mournful dream is o'er,
Our eyes shall seek a holier dawn,
And nobler glory than before.

The Baltimore papers give a list of the killed and wounded in the election riots of Monday. There were 4 killed; 14 fatally wounded, and 60 wounded, some dangerously. Among the wounded are 3 women and 4 boys.

Died in Monroe county on the 26th ult., Mr. Wm. Thraikill, Sen., in the 90th year of his age—being the oldest man in the county.

The snow on Friday was so heavy on the Western New York Railroads as to bring snow plows into use. Some of the trains were delayed in time.

The heroic Sir Charles Napier wrote very beautifully and touchingly to a lady on the eve of his great victory at Meane, "I'll survive, I shall soon be with those I have loved."

An old widow, when her pastor said to her, "God has not deserted you in your old age," replied, "No, sir; I have a very good appetite still!"

The arms of a pretty girl, wound tightly around your neck, has been discovered to be an infallible remedy in case of sore throat. It heats pepper tea all hollow.

Accident—Cannon Burst.—During a F. M. meeting in Burlington, Iowa, on Saturday night, the cannon used for firing a salute, burst at the second fire, by which accident two Germans coopers by occupation, were severely hurt, one having his left arm so badly broken that amputation will be necessary to save his life; the other had his thigh broken.

The excesses of our youth are draft upon our old age, payable with compound interest, twenty years after date. Just bear this in mind, all you fast young men!

A Yankee at Panama sought shelter at the American Consul's from the earthquake; he thought even the earthquake would respect our flag.

A flower of the heart—a wife full of truth, innocence and love, is the prettiest flower a man can wear next to his heart.

ADVENTURES OF A BOTTLE.—A bottle, thrown overboard from the ship Adirondack, on the banks of Newfoundland, in September, 1855 containing a letter from a lady on board to a friend in Ireland was picked up in the river Shannon, in August, 1856, and the letter forwarded to its address.

New Orleans, it is said, has received a new impetus in business the last year. Its commerce is now larger than any previous year, and the buildings in the course of erection involve an expenditure of over two millions of dollars, including a medical college, two spacious churches, a synagogue, and other public buildings.

Result at Chicago.—Douglas has been terribly beaten in his own home—the Fremonters carrying Chicago by over 1500 majority! Last spring, the Democracy elected their Mayor by over 500 majority! The change has been great—a gain for the Republicans over 2000.

The Shakopee (M. T.) Advocate of the 20th, reports the sinking of one of the Minnesota Packet Company's boats, the Lady Franklin, while on her upward trip to St. Paul, and the loss of two lives. The event happened near Bad Axe, Wis., and was occasioned by striking a snag, when the boat immediately careened and sunk to her upper decks. There were on board one hundred and seventy-five passengers of whom it is supposed two found a watery grave.

Confidences and Confessions.

BY E. W. DEWEES.

The clear, cheerful fire glowed warmer and brighter, as the darkness of the winter evening gathered without.

Cousin Harry and I sat cozily beside it, enjoying the pleasant warmth, and giving full rein to our wandering fancies.

He was leaning back dreamily in his easy chair—I, silently musing opposite him, with my feet (they were not large ones, reader) resting on the low fender.

My eyes were fixed on the glowing coals; but now and then I could not help stealing a glance at cousin Harry's face, in order to conjecture the subject of his long reverie.

He was in a night dreamy mood, and his dreams were evidently pleasant ones on the whole, though many varying emotions swept across his manly features.

I too, as I sat there looking demurely into the fire, had certain little dreams of my own. Did I mention that cousin Harry was not my cousin—only a ward of my father's, brought up in our family, to whom that title was given by courtesy? But that, of course, had nothing to do with my dreaming, or not dreaming.

Harry broke the long silence at last, by saying:

"Come and set here by me, cousin Olive, I want to tell you something."

I went and took a low seat at his feet and leaned my head against his knees, as I had done from childhood. Dear cousin Harry, how I loved him!

He passed his hand caressingly over my curls and said:

"Olive did I ever speak to you about Miss Ruthersford—Miss Mary Ruthersford?"

"No, cousin."

"And yet I have never had, and do not wish to have, any secrets from my little cousin. But this is proof," he added, laughing, "that the old line which says, 'The heart feels most when the lips speak not,' is true. If I have not spoken to you of Miss Ruthersford, it must have been because I have felt too much to give easy utterance to my thoughts."

Olive, she is the loveliest creature I ever looked upon. I met her last summer, when I was traveling in Europe. We travelled through Italy together, and each day that I spent in her society I admired her more. In short, Olive, I fell in love with her."

"Yes," said I. "I was glad to be able to utter even that one word, and so glad that my face happened to be turned so that Harry could not see it."

"She has just returned to this country," continued he, "and this very night decides my fate. I sent a note to her this morning requesting an interview. An hour from this time sees me the happiest man in America, or the most miserable."

I clasped my arms tightly round Harry's knees and I am sure, even in that bitter moment, I breathed a prayer for his happiness, come how it might.

My tears could no longer be quite restrained but Harry naturally misunderstood their cause. He patted my head with playful tenderness, and rising himself, he raised me too, and kissing my cheek, said:

"Thank you dear Olive, for your sympathy. I am going now—give me your good wishes."

"Farewell, Harry," I whispered, and he was gone. How much there was to me in one word I had spoken—farewell!

I did not sit up to wait for Harry's return as I at first intended to do.

By the time I began to expect him, my head ached so, and my eyes were so swollen with crying, that I knew it would not do for him to see me. So I went to bed and laid awake the whole night through, and thought of cousin Harry, and how kind he had always been to me, till my heart ached.

The next morning I was really quite ill and feverish, and I kept my room all day. But the suspense was intolerable to me—I longed to hear Harry's voice again, even though his words struck to my heart like daggers—therefore when the darkness of twilight came I thought I might venture; so I slipped on a wrapper, and stole down stairs to the little sitting-room where I knew he would be sitting by the fireside.

Yes, he was there, and sitting very quiet and still. I could not tell anything by his face as I entered—but perhaps that was because I had not courage to half look.

I slipped in very softly behind him, and before he could see me, was nestled on the sofa by his side, with my face screened behind his shoulder.

I thought he would be surprised, or pleased to see me—or at least I expected him to speak to me; but he never said a word—he sat still, looking into the fire.

gentle smile, and merely said, as he drew me to him:

"Do not cry, my poor little Olive, do not cry. He soothed me and caressed me as if I had been a child. Afterwards, he added, in a sterner voice:

"Yes, it is all over now, and I must bear my disappointment like a man."

He did bear it like a man. I saw and understood all his struggles—his stern endurance of his sorrow. I saw how keenly he suffered, and yet how bravely and cheerfully he bore himself; I loved him more and more; and yet I was so sorry for him, that if I had thought it would have been of any use, I would have gone myself to the lady whom he blessed with his love, and pleaded with her for him. But for this it was quite too late. Miss Ruthersford was already engaged to another when she returned home.

But much as I suffered in seeing Harry suffer, I had one consolation. He did not brood in moody silence over his disappointment; he loved to talk with me on the theme nearest his heart. He liked to tell me again and again, all the particulars of his acquaintance with Miss Ruthersford. Of the pleasant days when they traveled together—of her exceedingly loveliness, and of the many little incidents on which he founded his hopes, his almost certainty of her preference, and of his utter inability to account for the fickleness which had prompted her to unite herself to another.

I did not suggest that the superior fortune of the new lover might be his attraction, for fear of paining Harry; but apart from all feminine jealousy that is my view of the case, from which nothing can ever change me.

Be that as it may, Harry thought her perfection; he sorrowed and grieved for her; and I had enough to do to console him. Oh, how thankful I felt to know that I had the power to do so. And when I had succeeded in chasing the gloom clouds from his brow, and I saw him smiling and cheerful, I felt as happy as a queen.

One day he said to me:

"My dear, kind Olive, how well you know how to comfort me. How should you understand so well what I feel and need—how have you learned?"

"I have had a similar sorrow myself," I replied, with a trembling voice.

Harry looked at me tenderly, and drew me to him—My poor, little Olive, I broke from him with bursting tears, exclaiming, "don't pity me, don't—I can't bear it!"

From this time I often noticed Harry's eyes gazing on me with tender, pitying interest. I knew what he was thinking of, and a blush never failed to rise to my cheek, for I trembled for my secret, which was, however, never more secure.

Harry's mind gradually regained a more buoyant tone. His thoughts were no longer confined to a single painful topic, and he began once more to take an interest in what was passing around him. He became more like his former self.

We were very much together; the sorrow we had shared together had made us very near and dear to each other, and I am afraid I was a very conscious maiden, but I began to fancy that the interest Harry took in me was deepening.

I could not mistake the glance with which his eyes rested upon me—the bright smile which welcomed my approval—the delight he took in everything I did or said.

My old day-dreams and fireside dreams came back to me, sweeter than ever. We, both of us retained our old habit of musing by the twilight fire. It was at that time and place that most of Harry's confidences had been made, but it had now been long since he had alluded to the past.

The long winter had merged into a late cold spring, and the cheering blaze was still agreeable as we sat one evening in our usual places.

After a long silence I chanced to look up to find Harry's eyes earnestly regarding me.

"Olive," he said, abruptly, "do you believe in second love?"

"Sometimes, in a man," I replied carelessly; "in a woman, never."

Harry was silent for a few moments; he then said:

"Your first position is true, Olive, I know it and feel it. But your second is flagrantly false, or if not," he added, vehemently, "I swear I'll make it so. Olive you must and shall love me!"

"Do not swear, Harry," said I; "it is wicked, and besides, I greatly mistake if you do not soon wish that vow unregistered."

He did not heed the light tone of my reply, but continued earnestly:

"Olive, the past has become to me as a dream of something unreal and transitory. The love which has grown in my heart for you is founded on surer foundations. It is entwined with every fibre of my being. Olive, I could no more give you up than I could part with life itself. Dearest, let the past be the past, I beseech you, for us both."

"I can consent to a great deal, Harry," said I, giving him hand, "but I can never consent to give up my past—my dear, beautiful past—and never, never can I give up my first love."

Harry looked deeply pained and grieved. I saw that I was torturing that noble heart which had lately suffered so much. I had not the cruelty even by a moment's further trilling to delay its approaching happiness. I therefore added softly:

"How if I admit, Harry, that you were my first love? Would you then insist upon my choosing a second?"

Harry looked at me in astonishment. "But you told me—" he began.

"Well, what if I did?" I interrupted, a little snappishly, "it was all true enough, but why must I be put to the blush, by being made to confess how long I thought of you before you even cast a glance on me?"

Harry gazed at me with beaming eyes, while his mind evidently ran over the past.

"My poor Olive," he said, at last, while tears actually stood in his eyes, "and have you indeed suffered for my sake? Was it thus you learned so well how to comfort me—selfish, ungenerous creature that I was? But that is past now," he continued, as he folded me in his arms, "henceforth it shall be for me to play the part of comforter, and I will see if I cannot make a lifetime's devotion atone for anything you may have suffered in the past."

A SMART BOY.—"Well sonny, whose pigs are those?"

"Old sow's sir."

"Whose sow is it?"

"Old man's sir."

"Well then, who is your old man?"

"If you'll mind the pigs, I'll run home and ask the old woman."

"Never mind, sonny, I want a smart boy; what can you do?"

"Oh, I can do more than considerable, I can milk the geese, ride the turkeys to water, hamstring the grasshoppers, light fires for flies to court by, cut the buttons off dad's coat while he is at prayers, keep tally for dad and mam when they scold at a mark—old woman is always ahead."

"Got any brothers?"

"Lot's of 'em—all named Bill, except Bob, his name's Sam—my name is Larry, but they call me Lazy Lawrence for shortness."

"Well you are most too smart for me!"

"Travel on, stick-in-the-mud, I shall not hire you for a boss to-day."

Among the novelties of the day is a musical automaton that plays upon the flute and cornet with remarkable precision. His repertoire embraces some twenty tunes, from grave to gay, from lively to severe; he plays on real instruments, the wind coming out from between the lips as in a live man. It is a wonderful instance of mechanical ingenuity, and Mr. Van Oeckelen, the inventor, has spent seven years in its construction, and has now brought it from Holland to exhibit it in this country.

Humor in Rags.—We observed yesterday a little thin old man with a rag bag in his hand, picking up a large number of small pieces of whalebone which lay in the street. The deposit was of such a singular nature, that we presumed to ask the quaint looking gatherer how he supposed they came there. "Don't know," he replied in a squeaking voice, "but I suspect some unfortunate female was wrecked hereabout somewhere."

"Jenny," said a landlady the other morning to her help "was there any fire in the kitchen last night while you were sitting up?"

"Yes ma'am," said Jenny, there was a spark there when I went down, and I soon fanned it into a flame."

The landlady looked suspiciously at Jenny, but the innocent girl went on scrubbing and humming "Katy Darling."

A farmer returning home in his wagon after delivering a load of corn, is a more certain sign of national prosperity than a nobleman riding in his chariot to the opera.

FEARFUL STORM ON LAKE MICHIGAN.—We learn from the Chicago Bulletin that a fearful storm occurred on the 24th, and 25th of October on Lake Michigan resulting in the loss of two propellers and a loss of from 40 to 60 human lives.

A WHOPPER.—The Hartford (Conn.) Courant says there is a baby in that city only five months old and weighs one hundred and fifty-six pounds!

For the Cynthia "News."
PLEASANT RIDGE, Ky., Nov. 15th, 1856.
Mr. Editor—You will please give the following in your paper. The first is a note which I wrote to Judge Hudnall, in regard to an insult he offered me on the street. The second is his reply to that note; and as he says "his feelings about the matter," as he has given his privately, I desire to give mine publicly, not only my feelings, but my opinion of the man who willfully offers an insult without one shadow of justification or provocation, and then after reflecting and knowing that he has trampled upon the rules of politeness and justice has not the honor, candor, or manhood, to acknowledge it, nor the nobleness of spirit to retract it. As to the language he made use of, or the manner in which he endeavored to insult me I would treat (as I did at the time) with perfect derision, and contempt, had it not been that he insulted something that he took particular pains not to mention, and for which I feel duty bound to call upon Judge Hudnall, to retract if he was wrong, or to justify himself if not. I will now insert a copy of my note to him as I reserved one.

PLEASANT RIDGE, Ky., Nov. 10th, 1856.
Judge Hudnall:
Sir:—It has been my misfortune to gain your ill-will, how, I do not know, nor is it my purpose to inquire or to ask any explanation whatever. The object of this note is simply to warn you of ever giving publicity to what you insinuated you would, as I shall defend myself from this attempt at injury, as I would an assault upon my person. I wish to live peaceably with all men, but not to the sacrifice of my individual rights.
I made an enquiry upon the street as to who were the Judges of the election, not of you in particular, but of several gentlemen that were standing close by, when I received an unkind and ungentlemanly reply from you. I have always treated you with politeness and courtesy, and have never entertained any other feelings for you but those of friendship and respect until of late. I wish this matter to rest here, if carried further I shall give publicity to every matter connected with it.

Geo. W. Swore.
FALMOUTH, Ky., Nov. 10th, 1856.
Mr. Geo. W. Swore,
Sir:—Your note of this date is at hand, and I now hasten to give you my feelings about the matter to which you have alluded. I thought that after our last meeting, I allude to the one in Watson & Jamerson's Store, that I should hear no more about our difficulty, but you have seen proper to bring it up again. I was prepared to make all proper acknowledgements, and explanations, on that morning, but you refused to hear any, and I now assure you that the offer will not again be made by me. I feel no ill-will towards you; I have always entertained good feelings for you until here of late. You seemed to wish to dictate to me rather than to allow any man to do. The latter part of your note seemed to come in the way of character of a threat, or warning against giving publicity to what you imagine I alluded to on the morning of the 4th, inst., permit me to say to you in all candor, that you mistake your man, I am not one of those who are going about speaking of a man behind his back, that I would not say to his face. What I have to say, to you or any other man I am not afraid to say to his face. I am no slanderer or defamer of men's characters behind their backs, these belong to cowards and not to gentlemen. I wish no difficulty with you at all, and since you refused to hear any explanation of the matter, I intend to have nothing further to do with it, pro or con. As for your threat or warning, I totally disregard it, I am not one of those that can be intimidated from my regular course of business.

J. T. HUDNALL.
On Tuesday the 4th, inst., being the day of the election, I was in Falmouth, and made an enquiry as to who were the Judges of the election, Judge Hudnall, being one of the number, in a very insinuating and ungentlemanly manner remarked, that he had that matter "fixed up." I then said I asked a civil question and expected a civil answer, some one by remarked that Mr. Hall, and Mr. Woodson, were the judges. Judge Hudnall said they were not, that he had objections to the latter, that Mr. Young would act in his stead; he then addressed me in an insinuating manner as before, saying at the same time he was a very good one. I asked him who had disputed it. He then flew into a "pet" and remarked that when I run against him, I run against a man, ("a snag") and made use of language that modestly and respect for those who may read this forbids me repeating.

It was such however that you frequently hear rude boys make use of in their contentions, and which a county Judge should disdain to make use of, if not through respect for himself at least for the position he occupies, and the people he represents in the capacity of county Judge. It is not the first time that Judge Hudnall has forgot his position and respect for the public. He no longer than two months ago, made this declaration on the street, "that he would do all in his power right or wrong, honorable, or dishonorable against the American party."

excuse. Judge Hudnall then walked off and remarked that he could, and would hurt my feelings. I am aware of the manner and cowardly manner in which he thought to do it, and I here renew the warning or threat as he has seen fit to term it, never to hurt my feelings in the manner he intimated, or mention in my hearing what he insinuated, as I shall resent it as I would an attack upon my person let the consequences be what they may. He said that I seemed to dictate to him rather more than I ought. When sir, have I ever made the slightest attempt to dictate to you? Never sir, this is an assertion which is false, and will not answer your purpose, it will not be of any service to you. Sir, in what manner did you approach me to make any explanations or acknowledgements? Did you come to me as was your duty and say you had acted hastily and wished to set the matter right? If you had it would have been all right, and I could have given you my hand, but sir, you came to the store you named on business, and by accident met with me there and heeded to me. Was this the way to approach a person who was still laboring under the excitement you had occasioned? How did I know what you wanted? No sir, I do not understand your beaks or nods, if you feel that you have done wrong come out like a man of honor, and acknowledge it, if not, justify yourself as you approached me in the manner you did. I refused to follow you or hear you. You offered me your hand, I refused it because I had been wronged publicly, and I expected an acknowledgement. These sir, are my reasons for refusing to hear you.—If a man wrongs me and acknowledges it and regrets it, no one is more willing or anxious than I to receive his hand.—If I wrong a person I am always anxious to make amends. You acknowledge you wronged me but say it is your privilege. You say you are not the man to be intimidated. I do not suppose you are. No sir, would I if it was possible, but sir, you seem to be somewhat bold in your letter of the 10th, inst.—I am glad I have to deal with a man who is responsible for what he says, and his actions, I like yourself wish no difficulty with you and would prefer to settle this matter peaceably. I ask no more than what is just and honorable, and whenever you accede that to me I am satisfied, and whenever you prove that you have respect for yourself as a gentleman and respect for the position you occupy, and respect for the feelings of others, then I am willing to respect you as an older person than myself, and as a man occupying an honorable position.

PERSONAL APPEARANCE OF JOHN HANCOCK.—One who saw John Hancock in June, 1782, relates that he had the appearance of an advanced age. He had been repeatedly and severely afflicted with gout, probably owing in part to the custom of drinking punch—a common practice in high circles in those days. As recollected at this time, Hancock was nearly six feet in height and of thin person, stooping a little, and apparently enfeebled by disease. His manners were very gracious, of the old style, a dignified complaisance. His face had been very handsome. Dress was adapted quite as much to the ornamental as useful. Gentlemen wore wigs when abroad, and commonly caps when at home. At this time, about noon, Hancock was dressed in a red velvet cap, within which was one of fine linen. The latter was turned up over the lower edge of the velvet one two or three inches. He wore a blue damask gown lined with silk, a white embroidered waistcoat, black satin small-clothes, with silk stockings and red morocco slippers. It was a general practice in genteel families to have a tankard of punch made in the morning, and placed in a cooler when the season required it. At this visit Hancock took from the cooler standing on the hearth a full tankard, and drank first himself, and then offered it to those present. His equipage was splendid, and such as is not common at this day. His apparel was sumptuously embroidered with gold, silver lace, and other decorations fashionable among men of fortune of that period, and he rode, especially upon public occasions, with six beautiful bay horses attended by servants in livery. He wore a scarlet coat, with ruffles on his sleeves, which soon became the prevailing fashion.

HORSE SHOES ON A NEW PRINCIPLE.—A Philadelphia mechanic has constructed a horse shoe in such a manner that it requires no nails and can be put on by any one without the aid of a blacksmith. Attached to the shoe is a flange extending around the hoof, and at the back of the shoe, which lies over the frog of the horse's foot, is a joint, held in its place by a screw, which allows the shoe to open and close, so as to accommodate itself to the size of the hoof. Between the hoof and the plate is placed a layer of gutta percha, for the purpose of preventing injury to the hoof or leg of the horse by concussion, while running over hard roads or streets. The mechanism is very simple, and the cost much below that of ordinary shoes.

A PERFUMED BREATH!
WHAT our gentlemen would breathe under the curse of a disagreeable breath when by using the "BALM OF A THOUSAND FLOWERS."
As a dentifrice would not only render it sweet but leave the teeth white as alabaster! Many persons do not know their breath is bad, and the subject is so delicate their friends will never mention it. Pour a single drop of the "Balm" on your tooth brush, and wash the teeth night and morning. A fifty cent bottle will last a year.
A beautiful complexion may easily be acquired by using the "BALM OF A THOUSAND FLOWERS,"
It will remove all spots and freckles from the skin leaving it soft and rosy as a rose. Wet a towel, pour on two or three drops, and wash the face night and morning.
Savory Maple Elix.—Wet your shaving-brush in either warm or cold water, pour on two or three drops of "BALM OF A THOUSAND FLOWERS," rub the beard well, and it will make a beautiful, rather much facilitating the operation of shaving. Price only 50 cts.
